We are creating this holistic community through programming, social interactions, and social empowerment while honoring our playful spirit. We share our gifts with each other to nurture our relationships and ourselves, and to advance our search for wholeness.

Many of the most important decisions we will make in our lives are made in our twenties and thirties. Young adults often face educational and career choices, relationship and family issues, and for many, the struggles of leading independent lives. The lives of many young adults are filled with transitions, each of which adds both new possibilities and new needs to our lives. In this time of great change in our lives, we often need a setting that nurtures and grounds us. Unitarian Universalism answers this need.

Participating in UCE's Young Adult Group is an opportunity to meet in a smaller group setting to explore Unitarian Universalism and spirituality, while building stronger ties within the community.

The #1 thing that UU young adults across the nation say they want is young adult covenant groups.

UCE provides a covenant group for young adults meeting the first Sunday of each month after service (~12 noon) October through May. You can join this group in October or in February.

If you are interested in joining a covenant group contact Eileen Wiviott (ewiviott@hotmail.com)
